In Q3/2022, we have suffered losses and we expect similar result for next quarter as well , two large projects encounter unexpected delay due to discovery of historical heritage during foundation excavation work , necessary and rather long process has been taken by our client to clarify with several related government agencies situation has been cleared and revised drawings has been processed, we have started our fabrication work and consequently delivery will be catch-up from first quarter next year However, raw material price increase due to China put restriction on her steel material export, together with shipping expense increase due to fuel price increase caused by Ukraine- Russia war , do create extra uncertainty to our profit expectation.

Yours Sincerely
